Sharing what Ten10 Junior Consultants are working on

As a Junior Business Analyst at International Personal Finance, I work within an Agile environment that emphasises collaboration, flexibility, and continuous improvement. A typical day involves attending stand-ups, refining user stories, working with the senior BA's with backlog management, and working closely with stakeholders to gather and clarify requirements. I relocated for the role and work primarily from the office, which has helped me quickly build strong working relationships and learn from the team around me.

My responsibilities include writing and updating documentation in Confluence, managing tasks in JIRA, and ensuring development aligns with business goals. One of the key challenges I've faced is balancing input from various stakeholders while maintaining clarity and focus for the development team — a skill I've developed through experience and feedback.

My biggest achievement so far has been taking ownership of some of the tickets in the JIRA backlog which has helped me understand the process in which IPF writes their user stories but also gave me first hand insight into some of the responsibilities of a product owner.
