Sharing what Ten10 Junior Consultants are working on

Hello, I'm Minnie, from Academy 37. I'm currently client side with Royal Mail, working as a Customer Solutions Analyst in the Customer solutions Team. I'm working on a large-scale API migration that allows Royal Mail's business customers to offer the Local Collect Service; essentially offering their customers the option to have parcels delivered to a location rather than a home address.

I use Ready API daily to test functionality for the new offering, mitigating customer errors and building test cases. It's an agile focused environment, with two daily stand-ups and reviews, constantly refining our stakeholder management practices as we work towards a hard deadline.

My work pattern rarely changes, a favourable 9AM to 5:30pm shift in the office, allowing me to have consistency in my typical day. I like to get to the office around fifteen minutes earlier than my start time so I can make sure I'm all set up with a Rington's tea and at my desk fully prepared.

I've relocated to Milton Keynes and the five-day week in the client's office has helped me settle and build strong networks with my colleagues, both client-side and fellow Ten10 consultants. The greatest challenge I initially faced was shifting my mindset from wanting to know everything right away to enjoying the process of learning. More so now, I no longer feel the pressure to give the answer immediately and have a new-found curious habit to ask questions and explore ideas rather than rush to find instant certainty.

My greatest achievement to date is growing my technical abilities. I'm more business minded naturally, however on a time-critical testing project recently, I successfully built three API test cases for the team. I've found my growth client side has stemmed from my ability to push myself out of my comfort zone and be willing to prove to myself in areas that challenge me.
